DEFIANT GIRL IN DANGER OF ARREST

All of Mrs. Hart's Belongings Replevined—More Trouble for Defaulting Bank Clerk's Sweetheart.

Lawyer Abe Levy, of This City, Has Been Retained by the Bank to Prosecute the Woman.

Judge Gilhooly this afternoon retained Abraham Levy to conduct proceedings against Anna Hart on behalf of the Elizabethport Bank.

She will be arrested and criminally prosecuted if Lawyer Levy can see his way clear to do this.

A writ of replevin against all her property was obtained in court this morning by Judge Gilhooly and the American Surety Company went on the Elizabethport Bank's bond of $30,000 in this matter.

SHERIFF AFRAID.

"If Bank Clerk Schrieber's sweetheart, Mrs. Anna Hart, had a million-dollar necktie about her throat I would not dare to touch it," said Sheriff Rinn today.

And the young woman herself, who, it is charged, wheedled fifty thousand dollars in money and jewels out of a five-a-week bank clerk, hurled defiance at the police and bank officials.

Not a jewel belonging to Mrs. Hart is in the possession of Jeweller Jacob Dreiser, of 252 Fifth avenue.

The woman in some mysterious way has stolen a march on the bank officials and regained possession of the $30,000 worth of gems she left in their keeping.

She placed them there to be cleaned, she says.

The Jeweller yesterday admitted that he was retaining $30,000 worth of her jewels to insure the payment of $12,000 still due on her bill of $60,000. Her five-a-week bank clerk had paid him the $48,000 on account.

JEWELS MISSING.

Today Mr. Dreiser informed the officials and their legal representatives that they had not one cent's worth of jewelry belonging to the woman in their possession. There was an attachment served on them yesterday.

The bank officials are now trying to discover how the woman and the Jeweller have outwitted them.

Mrs. Hart, heavily veiled but stylishly groomed, left her apartment at 1030 o'clock this morning and went to the New Amsterdam Bank, where it is claimed she has several thousand dollars on deposit, as well as a heavily stocked safe-deposit box. She spoke earnestly to the cashier for several minutes and then withdrew.

An Evening World reporter accosted her as she was leaving the institution.

"I am not Mrs. Hart," she said in reply to his address. Then she drew herself up in an imperious way and swept on.

From the bank she walked west and boarded a Broadway car to visit the offices of her lawyer, Mr. Goodrich, in Wall street.

SHERIFF WON'T TOUCH IT.

Deputy Sheriff Rinn said this noon to an Evening World reporter:

"I won't lay hands on a single thing belonging to the Hart woman unless the bank furnishes a bond for double the amount involved.

"I want a $5,000 bond guaranteed before I'll touch her furniture. I consider it worth $2,500.

"It doesn't matter how much money she has. As long as she keeps it on her person I can't touch it under any circumstances.

"If she had a million-dollar necklace about her neck I couldn't take it.

"If I found jewels in her room and

OUR GOVERNOR TO-DAY. WOODRUFF FREES J. D. ROCKEFELLER.

To-Day's Occupant of the Executive Chamber, Woodruff, by Chance, Refuses to Recognize a Texas Requisition for the Standard Oil Man.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Oct. 11.—It was Timothy Woodruff's turn to be Governor of New York to-day. No one here ever knew who in Governor until he reaches the Capitol.

The messenger boys around the building, when asked who is Governor, invariably reply: "Wait a minute; I'll run in and find out." Then they rush into the executive chamber and say: "Oh, it's Treadwell," or "It's Young," or "It's Knapp." To-day they said, "It's Woodruff."

It developed to-day that Lieut.-Gov. Woodruff has already refused in his capacity of Acting Governor to grant the requisition of the Governor of Texas for the extradition of John D. Rockefeller and the other officers of the Standard Oil Trust who reside in this State for violating its anti-trust law. Although this refusal took place two weeks ago, the first did not become known until to-day.

An officer from Texas came to this

CHICAGO FEELS IT.

Pork Corner Paralyzed the Trade and Operators Are Scared Off.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—The effect of the Lipton pork corner has been to paralyze trade for the last two days. The price fell from 18 cents to 15 cents, where it remains, no shorts being had or called for.

The price does not vary and there seems to be no demand, for the simple reason that traders are scared off. No disastrous results are anticipated, however.

The markets seem to be waiting the next move of the corner.

In retaliation for his arrest, Peil accused the father and mother of the girl with actually selling their daughter to him for $90. In this he was corroborated by the child wife, Ida.

The engine had been running along the street-car tracks on Greenwich avenue.

BAIL REFUSED FOR LAWYER PATRICK.

Bondsman Long's $1,800 Unsatisfied Judgment Disqualified Him--No Trace Yet of the Missing Will.

Lawyer Louis J. Vorhaus, of the firm of House, Vorhaus & Grossman, this afternoon offered William S. Long, a builder, of 113 Broadway, as a bondsman for Lawyer Albert T. Patrick. In jail in connection with the alleged conspiracy to get Millionaire Rice's immense fortune.

Mr. Long told Magistrate Brann that he lived at 120 West Twenty-fourth street and was almost unacquainted with Patrick, having been introduced to him in the Tombs to-day.

He said he offered to be Patrick's bondsman out of friendship to Lawyer Vorhaus.

Long offered the apartment-houses at 27-29 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street as security.

He said they were worth $30,000 and had on them two mortgages aggregating $21,000, leaving a clear equity of $9,000.

The houses have a 160-foot front and are 100 feet deep.

Magistrate Brann sent for Assistant District-Attorney Osborne, who is prosecuting the cases against Patrick and Violet Jones, the two alleged conspirators.

Mr. Osborne gave Mr. Long a searching examination as to his qualifications and interest in having Patrick bailed.

Magistrate Brann refused to accept the bond because Mr. Long acknowledged there was an unsatisfied judgment for $1,800 on the property.

Charles T. Adams made a statement to a reporter of The Evening World this morning which throws more mystery on Lawyer Patrick's connection with the case.

"I knew Mr. Rice since I was a boy," said Mr. Adams, "and since he came to New York to live I was a frequent caller at his home. Perhaps I met him on an average of twice a week, and last saw him one week before his death. Mr. Rice frequently consulted with me about his legal affairs, and I had a good knowledge of his financial standing."

"Now, despite this, I never knew that Mr. Patrick was Mr. Rice's lawyer, and certainly Mr. Rice never spoke to me about him except to say that he was the attorney for the legation who were contesting Mrs. Rice's will."

"I never saw Mr. Patrick at Mr. Rice's house."

"On Oct. 4, 1897, Mr. Rice sent me his letter, which shows that at that time he

BRIDEGROOM WOUNDED 13

Shot Into a Crowd After Marrying Old Blind Woman.

After failing to find any one in Kingston, N. J., to marry them, John White, aged twenty-six, and Mrs. Maria Drake, aged seventy-six, went to Rocky Hill, near New Brunswick. Returning to Kingston they said they had been married by Squire Longstreet.

Last night Kingston youths gave them a charivari. White fired a double-barrelled shotgun loaded with carpet tacks and nails into the crowd.

William Loren's car and nose were torn off and Thomas Sullivan had the lower part of his body filled with nails. A dozen other persons in the crowd were wounded.

In the excitement White escaped, but was pursued out of town by a mob. He will be lynched if he returns.

The injured boys were taken to Princeton, where their wounds were dressed. Both will be disabled for life.

Mrs. Drake is blind and deaf, but has some money.

White and Mrs. Drake first married out last Tuesday night at Rocky Hill. A blinding rain came down, but youth and old age were proof against the elements, and made their way through the storm to the parsonage of Rev. Albert T. Reid, at Kingston.

"Where are your witnesses?" he inquired.

"Forget all about them," said the young fellow. He went to look for them while the toothless bride-to-be sat by the parson's kitchen fire to dry her clothes.

Every neighbor approached declined. Some said it was too stormy; others said more unkind things.

White, returning from his unsuccessful quest, took his blind bride out into the storm. Drenched to the skin, they reached the home of Justice John Voorhees. They battered the door, and a head was poked out of a window.

"Who is there?"

"John White."

"What's up?"

"Want you to marry me?"

"Is that the bride?"

Mrs. Drake.

"What old, blind Mary Drake?"

"Yes."

Then young John White and his blind and tottering bride trudged home, resolved to marry in the morning.

At daybreak they went to Rocky Hill, got married and returned to Kingston to be mobbed by indignant townspeople.

KILLED HIS SON AND HIMSELF.

East New York Man Shot His Eight-Year-Old Boy--His Inventions Failed.

A double tragedy was enacted this afternoon at 22 Gunter place, Brooklyn. A father put a bullet through the brain of his eight-year-old boy and then sent another bullet crashing into his own head. Both died almost instantly.

The father was Alexander Howard, forty-five years old, an insurance agent and inventor of toys. The boy, his favorite child, was named Leif.

Howard was employed in the Prudential Insurance Company's office at 345 Fulton street, Brooklyn. He did not go to business this morning and told his wife to keep the boy Leif home from school. At noon he finished writing a letter and asked his wife to deliver it to Supt. Shire of the insurance company. As soon as the woman left the house Howard began his preparations to kill himself and child.

He took the boy into the laundry in the basement, carefully closing the door. Then he placed the revolver on the lady's right temple and fired. The bullet went through the brain, causing instant death. He fired a shot into his own right temple. He fired a shot into his own right temple. He fired a shot into his own right temple.

When Mrs. Howard returned from her errand she searched the house for her errand. She searched the house for her errand. She searched the house for her errand. She searched the house for her errand.

The increased widow was so hysterical that little could be learned from her. The man's employers, however, said that he had been a well-known man in the community, but before an ambulance came from St. Mary's Hospital Howard had died.

The police say that Howard's brother committed suicide a year ago, and that a sister also took her own life.
